Let's Start!

It's important to understand the people we work with.

Learning Outcome

Use expressions about relationships and feelings in a range of social and work contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss feelings and impressions.
- I can give advice.
- I can talk about jobs and work.

Ask your partner:

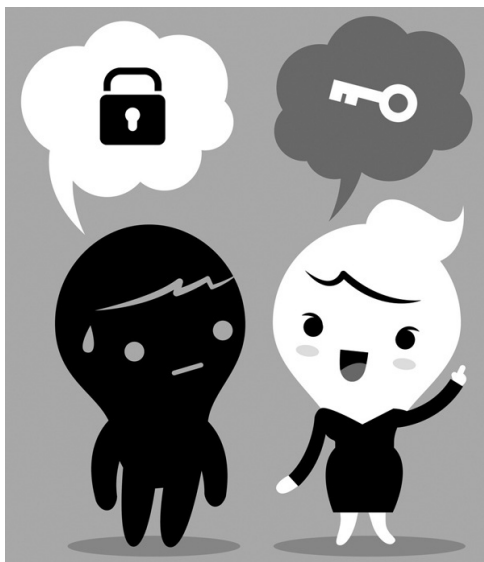

- What are the people you work with like?
- What do you like and dislike about them?

Let's Explore!

Miranda wants to know what Rocco thinks of Ferdinand.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Miranda: So, Rocco. What were your impressions of Ferdinand?
- Rocco: He's a likeable young man and should be easy to work with. He was honest about his experience, including where he didn't have any.
- Miranda: And that would be ...
- Rocco: Finances. As we had sensed from the beginning, his experience with public and press relations is impressive. I feel like he'll be a valuable team player. I value your assessment, Rocco. If you say you can work with him, I have full confidence.
- Miranda: How do you foresee the nature of our relationship?
- Rocco: I would advise you take on a mentoring relationship. Would you mind providing him some guidance?
- Miranda: Certainly. But I would suggest asking Janet to establish the nature of our working relationship.
- Rocco: Certainly. Do you imagine he might question your leadership?
- Miranda: On the contrary. He was quite respectful.
- Rocco: I'm glad. Do you have any other thoughts?
- Miranda: We must keep in mind that he has exceptional experience with the South American market. My advice to you and everyone is to withhold judgment if his ideas seem a little unreasonable when we think of our local situation. He strikes me as being very intuitive.
- Rocco: Thank you Rocco. I'll pass your recommendations on to Janet.

Let's Practice!

Miranda and Rocco talk about his new role*.

* A "role" means the way in which someone is involved in a situation.

Extension Activity

Let's assess and advise your colleagues!

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- On a piece of paper, write down the name of three to five people you work or go to school with.
- Write down your feelings and impressions of them. Your partner will do the same.
- With your partner, ask and answer questions about your co-workers or classmates.
- When appropriate, give your partner advice on how to deal or work with them.
- When you are finished, choose the best piece of advice from your partner and vice-versa.

Target Words

- team player (noun): someone who works well within a team or group
e.g. I think he'll be a valuable team player.
- assessment (noun): an evaluation of someone or something's qualities or abilities
e.g. I value your assessment, Rocco.
- to foresee (verb): to be aware of or imagine something before it happens e.g. How do you foresee the nature of our relationship?
- to withhold judgment (verb): to wait before making a judgment or evaluation about someone until knowing more e.g. I would withhold judgment until you see how his ideas turn out.
- leadership (noun): the position of being leader or in charge of a group e.g. Do you think he might question your leadership?
- mentoring relationship (expression): a connection between two people where one is responsible for giving training and advice to the other e.g. I would advise a mentoring relationship.
- recommendation (noun): a suggestion or piece of advice
e.g. I'll pass your recommendations on to Janet.

Learning Points

Giving Advice

In the workplace, you will often be requested to give, ask for, and respond to advice.

- You can use a conditional sentence (If clause) to give advice.

If you tell me you can work together, then I have full confidence.

- Use the verb advise and the pattern advise + someone + to + do something or advise + something.

I would advise you to take a different approach.

I would advise a mentoring relationship.

- Use the advice.

My advice is to avoid being judgmental.

- Use the verb suggest and the pattern suggest + doing something.

I would suggest talking to Marie about that issue.

- Use must +verb to make a strong recommendation.

You must keep in mind that he does have a lot of experience.

NOTE: The word advice is a noun and it is uncountable; therefore:

- it is never used in the plural: ~~advices~~
- it never comes after an or a number: ~~an advice~~

She gave me ~~a good advice~~.

She gave me good advice.

Talking about Feelings and Impressions

In the workplace, you will be dealing with people from different countries and backgrounds. Therefore, it is important to describe and talk about your feelings and impressions of co-workers. Here is some language you can use to talk about feelings and emotions:

When asking about someone's feelings and impressions of someone you can say:

- What are your impressions of ... (+ someone)?
- How do you feel about ... (+ someone)?
- Do you have any thoughts on ... (+ someone)?

When describing your feelings and impressions of someone you can say:

- He/She is/was ... (+ adjective)
- As we/I had sensed from the beginning ... (+ clause)
- I feel like ... (+ clause)
- He was quite/very/rather ... (+ adjective)
- He/She strikes me as being ... (+ adjective)

Examples:

- James: How do you feel about Danny?
- Seth: He strikes me as being very competent.
- James: And what are your thoughts on Jane?
- Seth: I've had a sense from the beginning that she's very inexperienced.
